

7 Questions to Ask When Choosing a Good Contractor

Does the company have a physical location?

Fly-by-night contractors work from their trucks and easily disappear. Someone with an office you can find on a map is more likely to be found again.

Does the contractor carry proper insurance?

Every contractor should be able to provide you a copy of what type(s) insurance they carry.

How long has the company been in business?

Have the contractor show you proof. Many so-called contractors are only in business for storm season.

Can the contractor provide references?

A reputable contractor will have a bevy of satisfied customers willing to provide a good word.

Does the contractor provide a warranty?

Ask about both a workmanship and a product warranty. A written warranty is even better.

Does the contractor have a website?

If so, check it out, even if it's from your phone while the contractor is talking to you. See what sort of information they have available at your fingertips.

Who does the actual work?

Ask who will be coming to your house, and if there will be an accountable supervisor on site at all times with whom you can communicate.

Bonus Tip: The lowest bid often ends up being the most expensive.
